

Like the previous volumes in this series, this book fills a gap in reflective political science literature, but adopts a different focus to the usual thematic debates. It captures the people behind the contributions, their careers, and their intellectual journeys: Hannah Arendt, Karl Deutsch, Carl Friedrich, Jane Mansbridge, C. Wright Mills, Guillermo O'Donnell, Carole Pateman, Adam Przeworski, Robert Putnam and Kenneth Waltz.

These intellectual biographies, moreover, are written by authors who have read and studied their subjects' work – and been influenced by it themselves in their own intellectual development. The premise of this volume, like its predecessors, is not just that our founding 'giants' should not be forgotten, but that we should recognise the extent to which our achievements today derive from standing on their shoulders.

'This new volume analyses more original contributions by grandparents and granduncles of current political science. It is of major interest because it is less about biographies than substantive discussion, including on topics that have become even more prominent in our research agenda, such as the global age, political order, the centrality of political economy, the crisis of civil society, or the theory of democracy. In times of change, it is worth revisiting the foundations of what we knew and need to rescript.'

– Josep Colomer, Georgetown University

'It is often argued and lamented that junior researchers have less time and fewer opportunities to familiarise themselves with the classics of political science and with the overall breadth of the discipline. The third volume in this series adds ten further influential scholars to those already analysed in the 2009 and 2011 volumes. The series begins to delineate a reflexive self-portrait of post-WWII political studies that offers a compact but comprehensive and thorough guide for new generations of scholars.'

– Stefano Bartolini, European University Institute

Also available

Masters of Political Science, Volume 1, ISBN 978-0-9558203-3-5

Maestri of Political Science, Volume 2, ISBN 978-1-9073011-9-3

MARTIN BULL is Associate Dean for Research & Innovation and Professor of Politics at the University of Salford, and a former Director of the European Consortium for Political Research. He is a specialist in Italian and comparative politics.

GIANFRANCO PASQUINO is Senior Adjunct Professor at SAIS Europe and Professor Emeritus of Political Science, University of Bologna. He received the Conference Group on Italian Politics and Society Life Achievement Award in 2016.

An imprint of the European Consortium for Political Research
ecpr.eu/shop

Cover image Sebastian Svenson © unsplash.com

Cover design by Kate Hawkins

MARTIN BULL AND
GIANFRANCO PASQUINO

Maestri of Political Science, Volume 3

Maestri of Political Science Volume 3

Edited by Martin Bull and Gianfranco Pasquino